Grandfather Stories: and some of 'em are true Don Bisett

It happened like this, you see. It was spring. A glorious spring day. The first really warm day that made you think it just might be warm enough to swim in the spring fed creek... Sure school was on but we weren't really pulled by the three R's on this fine day and fate played right into our hands. We were chosen to go tote the drinking water from the spring for the school... The wild strawberries were almost at their sweetest, almost plum ripe, and they grew in plentiful abundance in the woodland meadows and under the partial shade of the new leaves on the massive oak and walnut trees... The water was good in the swimming hole...Shadows began their fast march toward dusk and the quick spring darkness as the sun began its decent. We had to face up to our crime and its sure punishment...
