¿Qué es el sueño? ¿Qué tienen los sueños? ¿Por qué se producen? ¿Para qué sirven? ¿Por qué vivimos los sueños con tanto realismo? ¿Por qué en esos sueños adquirimos habilidades inconcebibles para la Tierra? ¿Por qué sabemos por dónde ir en mundos supuestamente imaginarios? ¿Por qué tenemos don de lenguas que cuando despertamos olvidamos? ¿Es posible interpretar sueños sin tener en cuenta al paciente? Mi respuesta es rotunda: ¡No! Bueno, en realidad se puede, si queremos convertirnos en feriantes. Me pregunto cada noche cómo podemos saber lo que un "Yo interno" quiere que el consciente modifique, si no conocemos al paciente; cuándo se considera suficiente que se conoce a alguien. Éstas son algunas de las miles de interrogantes a las que me enfrento en esta nueva profesión de intérprete de sueños. Conduzco mi cuerpo hacia el respaldo del butacón y mi mente fuera de mi cuerpo para entender otra de las cuestiones que me ha llamado siempre la atención sobre los sueños. ¿Cuál? Pues que hay dos parámetros importantes a destacar. El primero tiene que ver con los datos del conocimiento, aunque sea el Yo interno, el subconsciente, o el alma, (según para quien), el que aporta la base de datos necesaria para componer el sueño. El segundo parámetro es que siempre se llevan a cabo en soledad. Es algo que no se puede compartir con nadie y es intrínseco de cada individuo. Soledad es sinónimo de aislamiento y retiro, de desierto e incomunicación, de separación y desánimo, de recogimiento y retraimiento y de viudez e insociabilidad. A pesar de haber superado los mil y un sueños analizados e interpretados, siempre me pregunto qué significa para mí este símbolo y cuál es su sentido en mi vida
