Frankie has worked hard to forge a happy family home for her children, can one letter destroy that? Frankie has not spoken to her mother for twelve years now she wants Frankie to come and see her, it will mean a journey alone for Frankie during which she will have to look over the events leading up to emancipation. What does it take for a woman to cut off her mother? How does that first important relationship with our mothers affect the rest of our lives? Will Frankie be able to foster a relationship now after all this time?
