Introduction

The Boys in the Boat is the true story of the 1936 United States Olympic eight oar rowing team. It is set against the backdrop of the Great Depression in the United States and the growing power of the Nazi party in Germany. The Nazis desire to use the 1936 Olympics, held in Berlin, for the furthering of propaganda describing the superiority of those of Aryan descent is stressed within the story, as is the political atmosphere which nearly led several nations – including the United States – to boycott the Berlin Olympics.
